HAPPY BIRTHDAY FOR LITTLE JACK SCOTT

The home of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Scott was the scene of one continuous round of pleasure Sunday afternoon, when friends, old and young, of Jack Scott-Jr., gathered regardless of the weather, to help him celebrate his sixth birthday. There were games and music until 3:30 when Mrs. Scott announced luncheon and all repaired to the dining room. The table was artistically decorated in Easter colors. The small hand-painted baskets most as place cards pleased the little ones. The bonbons played a prominent part. It is needless to say all did justice to the lunch such as only Mrs. Scott can prepare. The young man was the recipient of many nice gifts. At 4:30 the guests departed, wishing Jack many happy returns and voting his party one of the most pleasant of the Easter season.

"BLOOD CLOT ON BRAIN" DESCRIBED BY LAWSON

The following interview by Thomas W. Lawson on the condition of President Wilson will interest many people:

Before taking the responsibility of saying what follows, which I do because of my idea of what patriotic citizens owe, in the present state of unrest and worry, to their country, I feel I should say that I have no ulterior motive, political or otherwise.

While I am an ardent republican, I have nothing but the profoundest patriotic feeling for our president, whom, as is commonly known, I had a fundamental hand in nominating at the Baltimore convention for his first candidacy, and subsequently a part in electing to his second term. In addition I am acutely on edge to the duty of every citizen in the present grave crisis, to bury his partisanship and individual feeling in an effort to do his bit for his country.

At the first call for humanity's defense I hurried my two sons and two daughters into khaki, which my only sons, Capt. Douglas and Lieut. Arnold Lawson still wear. I also offered my fortune, a considerable portion of which I have with my personal efforts and labor to the cause. I mention this at the beginning that all may know my purpose, and only purpose of saying what I do.

At the first public word of the president's misfortune I jumped for Washington to get in my own way from the great amount of contradictory rumors and carefully planned camouflage, just what was the president's trouble. Largely because of my peculiar relations with public affairs and the one who steers them, I secured at the beginning the true vision of the president's case.

I knew then that the president's trouble was what is commonly known as a "clot on the brain." I knew then that the American people were "dying to get the facts," that they might for themselves vision the probable and probable result.

I am, perhaps, as I will explain later, one of the few lay experts on this terrible disease, and my first impulse was to give to the public what I now do, but I shuddered at the responsibility, and on second thought decided it might be best for the president and the nation if the president's condition be allowed to be in the public mind that which his wise Washington friends assured the world it was.

Since then I have followed in the minutest detail the president's case as it has been given in the world, and the different stages of hope and fear which have daily since the first White House bulletin gone the rounds of the nation.

When a few days ago there came from Washington what I knew must come—that the president had a "brain clot"—I decided the country should know what a "brain clot" is and what its results are. I know in a horse-sense way of medical high-browism.

Twenty-five I had a "brain clot" under almost the identical conditions as brought on the president's. I was and had been for a number of years working twenty-six hours a day in a most strenuous way. I was managing a number of important (to me) corporations, the welfare of which I was personally dependent upon my continuous effort. I had just come from a hard long trip across the country and was seated at a banquet given by my directors in honor of a successful mission. Between sippers and soup some one crossed me and I "saw red." Feeling that something was about to happen I made a rush for the open air and fell on my face in the driveway, where I was found apparently dead. By the time I had been carried to a couch and medical aid arrived it was decided that I had had what at that time was a little understood trouble "clot on the brain." My left leg and arm were partially paralyzed, and it was shown me by the experts within four weeks were being called in.

The mental system of a "brain clot" victim must have complete, absolutely complete rest, that under no circumstances must the brain be allowed to work in any way that would excite it. That "crossing" a "brain clot" victim, in any way, even to the simplest argument might cause him to start "seeing red" and that once the "seeing red" started no earthly power could stop its lightning-like spread, with the result a violent brain storm, which would almost instantly bring on a second stroke which must result in "complete paralysis" or death.

The paralysis of the left leg and arm and some paralysis in the left side might be practically worked off under very favorable conditions, in twelve to eighteen months, but could not be completely worked out of the victim's system until seven years had entirely renewed his physical being.

That when the time came when one had recovered, that is when no paralysis outwardly showed, and no den passion and "seeing red," any unusual brain activity might and probably would bring on the awful

My opinion the result of my experience with "brain clot" under these exceptional conditions is that no man over fifty years old has ever lived in all modern times who has gotten at such an old well unless he develops his efforts and kept up to the mark, and under the most favorable conditions of rest, nursing and food I can imagine no more thoroughly brutal treatment than to permit him to take the risk for a single day of a second stroke, which would ruin his country's sake, his own, his family's and the world's.
